Introduction

The Hook

Lila Devereaux sings two sets a night at the Blue Heron and hears everything said at table nine. Last night she came to your office after closing, shaking, and said two men had discussed a job for Friday with her name in it. This morning she telephoned to say she had been mistaken, thanked you, and hung up. Her apartment is empty and the Heron says she is unwell.

How to use this adventure

This one-shot is designed for a single session with the AI Dungeon Master at dungeonmaster.website. Read the plot summary and NPC secrets before play. Players should not read beyond the hook.

Estimated duration: ~3hrs
Recommended party: 4 at level 2

The Adventure

Lila was not mistaken. For six years she has kept an account of everything said in front of her - not to blackmail anyone, but as insurance. Somebody has found out the book exists. Silk Castellane, who is trying to make the family respectable, has decided it cannot be allowed to, and has sent east for a man who arrives on the Thursday train.

She changed her story because Nick Castellane got to her first. He does not want her dead: he wants the book, to use against his brother, and has her in a room over the Anchor Light - Finnerty ground, where no Castellane would think to look. The Finnertys know and are charging him for it.

The investigators have until Friday night. They must learn who ordered the job and who is merely holding her, find the book (it is in the Heron, where she could reach it every night), and get her on a train before the out-of-towner finds her. He is patient, polite to hotel staff and has never been seen by anyone in Dorrance.

Lila Devereaux

Role

Singer at the Blue Heron

Personality

Poised, wry, tired of being part of the furniture. Lies gracefully.

DM Only - Secret

The book is taped inside the piano on the Herons bandstand. One entry is from table nine in 1946, the week before a district attorney was shot.

Suggested mannerism: lean into personality cues when this NPC speaks - give them a distinct voice.

Silk Castellane

Role

Elder son, running the familys legitimate front

Personality

Carnation, law degree, perfect manners. Regrets what is necessary.

DM Only - Secret

He does not know what is in the book. He ordered the job on the strength of a rumour, and the rumour was started by his brother.

Suggested mannerism: lean into personality cues when this NPC speaks - give them a distinct voice.

Nick Castellane

Role
Younger son, the familys fist

Personality
Direct, restless, exactly what he appears to be.

DM Only - Secret
He is hiding Lila from his own brothers killer and is beginning to like her. He will give her up for the book and feel bad about it.

Suggested mannerism: lean into personality cues when this NPC speaks - give them a distinct voice.

Red Finnerty

Role
Head of the Finnerty Boys

Personality
Cheerful, freckled, should not be mistaken for a forgiving man.

DM Only - Secret
He is renting Nick the room because he wants to see which brother wins. He would give a good deal for one page of that book himself.

Suggested mannerism: lean into personality cues when this NPC speaks - give them a distinct voice.

Resolution Paths

Path 1

Put her on the night train with the book. She is never heard from again; a postcard arrives a year later from a city by a different ocean.

Path 2

Trade the book to Silk for her life. He burns it unread, calls off the job, and owes the investigators a marker he will honour exactly once.

Path 3

Give the book to Nick. The brothers war starts that week. Lila stays in Dorrance under his protection, which is safer than it sounds and worse than she deserves.
